Cinderella

ACT I

Once upon a time, in a faraway land, there lived a young girl named Cinderella. Her days were shrouded in sadness ever since her mother's untimely passing. Her sorrow deepened when her father remarried a cruel woman with two equally unkind daughters. Despite the hardships she endured, Cinderella remained gentle and resilient, never uttering a word of complaint. As she matured, her inner beauty blossomed, endearing her to all who knew her, save for her resentful stepfamily.

One day, as Cinderella and her stepsisters danced joyously with their friends and neighbors, the Palace Attendants arrived with a momentous announcement: the Queen was hosting a grand ball at the palace to find a bride for her cherished Prince. Every eligible maiden was invited, including Cinderella's stepsisters. The household buzzed with excitement, fueled by dreams of wealth and status.

Yearning for a chance to glimpse the Prince, Cinderella dared to express her desire to attend the ball, only to incur her family's wrath. The wicked stepmother imposed additional chores upon her, relegating her to menial tasks while her stepsisters primped and preened for the evening's festivities. As Cinderella watched their departure, tears welled in her eyes.

To her astonishment, in her moment of despair, a group of fairies appeared, led by her Fairy Godmother. "Cinderella," the Fairy said gently, "dry your tears, for I have come to bring you joy. Tonight, you shall attend the grand ball, but heed my warning: you must depart before the clock strikes twelve." With a wave of her wand and the assistance of her fairy attendants, the Fairy Godmother transformed Cinderella into a vision of loveliness, ensuring her safe passage to the palace.

ACT II

The grand ball welcomed guests from every corner of the realm, their finery aglow under the palace's shimmering lights. Cinderella's arrival caused a stir, her radiant beauty captivating all who beheld her. The Prince, ever gallant, greeted her warmly and led her onto the dance floor, where they wove through the night in perfect harmony. Enchanted by her grace, the Queen watched with delight as the mysterious Princess stole the Prince's heart.

Mid-dance, the toll of the clock's chime shattered the moment, prompting Cinderella's hasty retreat from the ballroom.

After the ball at home, her family lamented their missed opportunity, oblivious to the Prince's fervent quest to find his mysterious dance partner.

In a twist of fate, the Prince arrived at Cinderella's doorstep, determined to uncover the identity of his beloved Princess. He danced with the stepsisters but caught a glimpse of someone hiding behind a chair in the back corner. Ignoring her stepmother's protests, Cinderella stepped forward, her presence captivating the Prince once more. In that moment, he recognized her as the one he sought, and to the joyous acclaim of the court, Cinderella and the Prince were united in marriage, their happiness destined to endure for all time.
